Final Project Proposal

For my final project, I will be recreating my portfolio site, coding it from the ground up.

My overall concept is to have most of the content viewable on a single page. Four categories of content will expand and contract as the user clicks on the specific sections. For sections with more detailed information, like my work projects, I will have those elements open up in a separate page. These differences are marked on the following wireframes.

I am still playing with a couple elements. User experience is not my strong suit, so if expanding and collapsing sections is more of a nuisance than an interesting, interactive feature I'll switch over to a continuous scroll design. I'm also unsure if it's necessary to have both a nav and the sections on the left. I know these will be worked out with your guidance, so I'm looking forward to getting your feedback thus far.
